Quadricuspid aortic valve

Daniel Hanratty, Olatunde Farode, Adrian Ionescu and Aprim Youhana

Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery, Morriston Hospital, Swansea, UK
Department of Cardiology, Morriston Hospital, Swansea, UK

Corresponding author. 34 St Stephens Mansions, Mount Stuart Square, Cardiff CF10 5LQ, UK. Tel: +44-07815775676; e-mail: danhanratty@doctors.org.uk (D. Hanratty).

Received 18 February 2012; accepted 25 February 2012

Keywords: Aortic valve • Echocardiography

A 59-year old lady underwent aortic valve replacement for aortic regurgitation. Her preoperative transthoracic echocardiogram showed a quadricuspid aortic valve (Fig. 1) and this was confirmed in the theatre (Fig. 2). The valve was excised and replaced with an Edwards Perimount Magna valve. She recovered well with no complications.