

FIGURE S3.—A scatter plot comparing daughter's birth order (reflecting the age of the mother cell) to the number of cells in the daughter-cell microcolony (a measure of the daughter's proliferative capacity). The plot represents 472 daughter cells born on estradiol during the RLS analysis of naïve mothers. A best-fit line indicates negative correlation between mother's age and daughter's proliferative capacity.