This paper provides a valuable documentation of a geospatial database for lakes of the upper midwest and northeast United States. The value of the database is well illustrated visually in non-uniform distributions of quality (Figure 5) and hydrological variables (Figure 6). The main points - some of which could be addressed in a revision of this paper - include:(1) [comment only] I have a few misgivings about such a large author list. There is a good justification of the authorship and no doubt, with a few self-citations, this paper will become well cited. But it still does not sit entirely comfortably with me, especially when I can still readily pick out simple typographical errors.(2) I was disappointed that the dataset extended until 2012. This is hardly a contemporary dataset and it raises a question for me about whether the database is sufficiently nimble to allow rapid incorporation of recent data and time series analysis.(3) I was a little concerned about the large number of 'in prep' articles being cited in section 8. Are these all necessary. Could some be substituted or supplemented with recent published articles. Are other articles recent such as:- Read JS, Winslow LA, Hansen GJA, Van Den Hoek J, Hanson PC, Bruce LC, Markfort CD 2014. Simulating 2368 temperate lakes reveals weak coherence in stratification phenology. Ecological Modelling 291, 142-150.- Read EK, L Carr, L De Cicco, HA Dugan, PC Hanson, JA Hart, J Kreft, JS Read, LA Winslow. 2017.
