Instructions to Authors

QJM welcomes contributions relevant to the science and practice of medicine. Original papers, describing either clinical research or basic scientific work, review articles, or advances in clinical medicine or medical science, commentaries, expressing personal or controversial views on any medical topic, and correspondence, are all possible. Contributors are asked to keep to these guidelines.

Manuscript submission. QJM uses a web-based submission and review system at http://www.editorialmanager.com/qjm/. Detailed instructions on how to use this system can be found on the QJM website. Please note that we will not publish individual case reports as original papers.

Plagiarism of material from published or unpublished work by another author is a serious offence, unless the material quoted is openly acknowledged. Authors should ensure that permission is obtained from the patient or patient’s relatives for publication in QJM with the clear understanding that their contents may be used for research purposes. Authors submitting a paper that is but one of a number of related papers should include a statement in the cover letter that so identifies the paper and the others.

Publication. Manuscripts, enquiries and other correspondence should be addressed to: Stephanie Sacharov, Editorial Assistant, QJM, 1706 Oxford Street, Oxford, OX2 6DX, UK. E-mail: QJM.editorialoffice@oup.com. Article titles and abstracts appear online through the Oxford University Press website (http://academic.oup.com/qjm).
